Work progressing

Work is progressing on the structure that will house George's Rock Shop and Rock.

The 9600 sq. ft. building will be used as a repair shop and storage facility for the trucks that haul Eagle-Picher ore.

Offices will occupy the south side of the building. Owner George Glerup says that his crew is now busy getting the building enclosed and that much of the inside finish work will be done this winter. Glerup will employ 10-15 at the facility. He estimated his investment is $300,000.

Pelican visitor

An unexpected and unusual visitor at the Carl Johnson place near Willowcreek last Sunday was a white pelican. The big bird, a very occasional visitor in these parts, was spotted by several members of the Saddleites riding by as well as Alvin Scott, who was driving past. The big bird was walking along the dusty road and refused to fly.

The youngsters picked it up and took it to the Johnson place where they turned it loose in the yard and it seemed content to stay. Being a bit cautious around the brother, Clifford White of Idaho Falls were Tuesday guests at the George Palmer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob White and family were Sunday dinner guests of the Maine family in Ontario. Their niece returned home to Spokane on Monday.

The L.R. Willoughbys and Ted Willoughbys of Baker had a Sunday picnic in the Wallowa Mountains and viewed the recent windstorm damage. Some roads were closed for a few days.

Mrs. Lloyd Lang visited last week at Sandy and Portland. The Derwin Anderson family returned with her.
